Vendor: Lausanne Institute, Kennett Square, PA

Description:

This course is a complete process, which addresses all the components necessary for managing an effective project. Managing projects successfully and effectively is a growing necessary and essential tool. The ability to gain the commitment and critical input from all the key players feeding into a project and impacted by the project, has become an essential set of skills for those responsible for leading and managing projects. The need for a systematic process as a tool for communicating among the various stakeholders is as critical as managing the process itself.

This course will teach an easy-to-use process for effective project management. Learn how to plan, schedule, and control your project. You will benefit from this training by learning skills and techniques that will improve your communications with management; improve coordination with peers and related work groups; and help you to identify areas for negotiation prior to project implementation. Benefit from the use of practical applications and systematic critical feedback. Understand the project flow over time.

Content:

Topics covered in this program are:

- Defining the overall project goals and objectives
- Clarifying and communicating the projects purpose to gain up-front commitment
- Gaining a clear definition of project authorities and responsibilities
- Organizing the project team and critical contributions
- Defining and committing resources
- Establishing a budget tracking process
- Planning and tracking tasks with Gantt Charts
- Focusing on the critical path
- Leading the project team...the people side
- Managing contingencies and systematic reviews

Benefits:

This is a course that will increase the manager's role and add to his professional training; prepare anyone to take on a project manager's role that will advance their career and benefit the organization; and assist teams that have been stuck in mid project.
